Cross-Asset Spotlight | Global

Rates Reprice

Signals, Flows, & Key Data: A weekly summary of key cross-asset monitors, data, moves, and models tracking sentiment, fund flows, and positioning. Last week, US 30-year yields crossed 5.2%, USD/JPY fell 3.9%, and KOSPI was down 1.4%.

Key highlights from last week:

- KOSPI fell 1.4%. Our Asia/EM equity strategists turned OW Korea equities as they think we are past the midpoint of unwinding leveraged ETFs, hedge fund leverage, and retail margin.
- US 30-year yields crossed 5.2% for the first time since 2007. Our rates strategists think the yield curve will steepen further unless inflation comes in higher than consensus expects and Chair Warsh clarifies his press conference remarks on inflation.
- USD/JPY fell 3.9%. Our G10 FX strategists think the Japan-US intervention has squeezed JPY shorts but is unlikely to reverse broad JPY weakness without lower US rates and weak financial conditions.
- LME copper rose 1.3%. Our metals strategists see copper being pulled into China and the US simultaneously, tightening global inventories and pushing up prices and timespreads.

COVA: Cross-Asset Correlation-Valuation Framework

Our correlation-valuation (COVA) scorecard aims to identify good portfolio diversifiers at reasonable prices, rewarding assets that have: 1) a more negative correlation to equities, 2) a more stable correlation, 3) a more negative downside beta, 4) more attractive valuations, and 5) more attractive carry. The higher the score, the better the portfolio diversifier is. For more details on the framework, see here.

Source: Morgan Stanley Research; Note: Overall score is a weighted average of correlation score (60%) and valuation score (40%). We show "long" for assets with correlation <0% based on average of 10yr and 6m correlation to MSCI ACWI, and "short" otherwise. Scores are based on the direction of the trade. Hedge ratio is computed using the inverse of historical beta to global equities over the last year. For assets with low correlation to MSCI ACWI (<20%), we use the inverse of relative vol to global equities as its hedge ratio. Hedge ratios of long vol strategies are expressed in terms of how much an investor would need to do to get an 8% vol equivalent of risk.
